

"I didn't feel a thing."

We've taken the Fear, Anxiety and Pain out of Dental Anesthetic Injections

We know that some patients get more nervous than others do at the mere sight of a needle and syringe. That's why this office now performs all anesthetic injections with a revolutionary system called The WAND.

the Wand™

Computer Controlled Local Anesthesia Delivery System

It doesn't look like a syringe.
It doesn't hurt like a syringe.
And it works better than a syringe.

A better injection for all patients

Whether injections make you nervous or not, The WAND helps us provide a more effective anesthetic delivery. You're more comfortable throughout the procedure, and we may be able to use new techniques so you won't experience the lingering numbness of your tongue, lips and face.

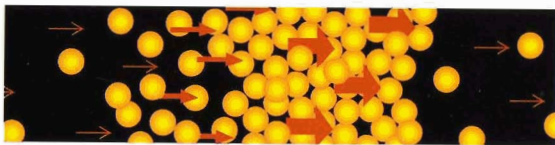

A more pleasant dental experience

The WAND is an excellent example of our efforts to bring you the latest dental technology, and to help all of our patients have a pleasant, positive visit to our office. Feel free to ask us if you'd like to know more about this remarkable new system.

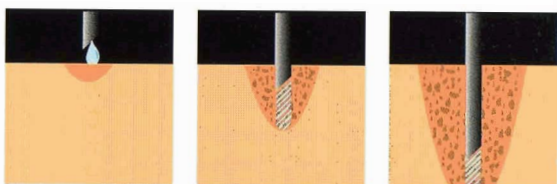

The WAND...the revolutionary new computer controlled local anesthesia injection system that conquers fear, pain and anxiety.

A microprocessor guides the anesthetic flow rate to insure safe, profound anesthesia.

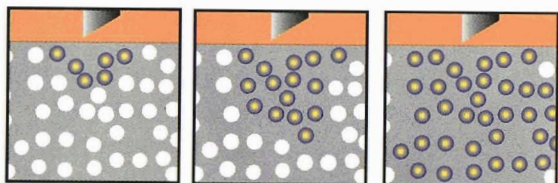

Computer Controlled Anesthetic Delivery

The microprocessor inside The WAND automatically compensates for different tissue densities. The anesthetic is delivered at a constant pressure and volume that's typically below the threshold of pain.

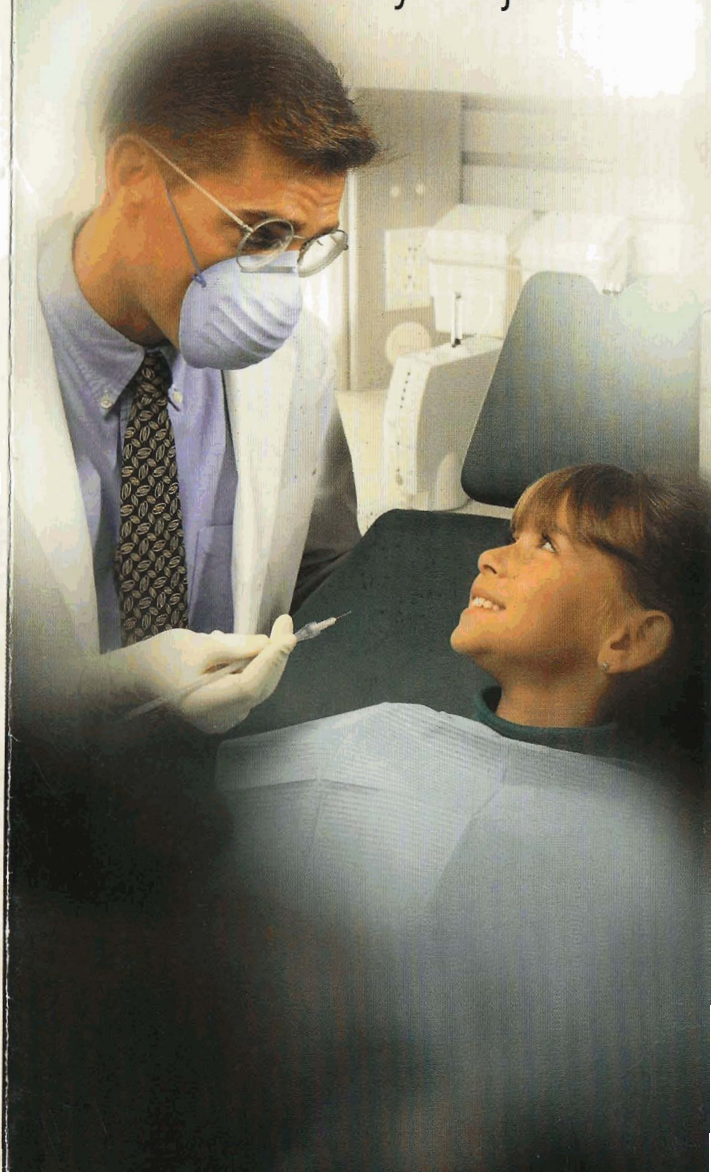

The computer provides a flow of anesthetic directly ahead of the needle. This numbs the site of insertion and develops a "pathway of anesthesia" so you hardly feel the needle at all.

The source of discomfort for most injections, however, isn't the needle, it's the flow of the anesthetic into your tissue. The WAND delivers the anesthetic at an optimal flow rate for a comfortable injection every time.

Fear. Not!
